

Heijokyu Izanaikan Museum. About 4 km west of Nara Park, inside Nara Palace Site Historical Park (Heijokyu-seki Rekishi Koen).

Daiichiji Daigokuden Hall (Former Imperial Audience Hall) (Reconstructed)

The Center of the Ancient Capital City, the Nara Palace (Heijokyu)

Heijokyo, the capital city once located in Nara. Constructed at its north central edge was the Nara Palace, the center where the emperor lived, and which had the national diet and other government administrative functions during the Nara period (710~784 CE).

Now a registered UNESCO World Heritage Site, it is both a historical park with reconstructions of buildings from the Nara period, such as the Suzakumon Gate and Daiichiji Daigokuden, as well as a relaxing place loved by the locals.

In addition, the Nara Palace Site and surrounding area have been getting more and more attention as a precious place where a diverse natural environment remains, as we can observe over 100 different types of birds and other wild life here.

It is here at the Heijokyu Izanaikan that we can feel firsthand all that the Nara Palace Site has to offer. Through rich displays that include excavated items, this "experience-style" national facility shows us how people lived during the Nara period.
